

Jim Marshall. Jim works with leaders, managers and teams to understand their current mindset and choiceset and challenges them to understand their impact on the organization.

As a facilitator, trainer and coach Jim has worked with individuals and teams in food service, at major universities and in manufacturing. He also serves as a peer coach for community leaders. In this role, he facilitates individual, organizational, and community-wide transformation.

Originally from Michigan, Jim is a former InterVarsity director, where he managed the organizational growth and leadership effectiveness of staff and student leaders throughout West Michigan and the nation. Jim often draws upon his varied work career – as a bus boy, door-to-door knife salesman and home builder – to reinforce the fact that leaders at all levels can make a difference.

Jim graduated from Western Michigan University with a bachelor's degree in business administration.

Jim has a passion for people, leadership and learning. He believes there is great power and potential inside each person. With the right ingredients any individual is capable of amazing growth and development. Jim's favorite quote is from Jesus, "he who has ears to hear, let him hear" because it points to one of the ingredients of growth—a hunger to learn.

Jim joined Humanergy in 2008. In his free time, he enjoys good food, good friends and good times with his wife Jamie, three daughters and close friends. He likes to run, read and explore falconry.
