

Ron Owens. Ron coaches managers and executive leaders who want maximize their careers by making wise day-to-day choices within a personal strategic vision.

Ron is a retired Fortune 500 executive with more than thirty years of expertise in manufacturing. A former U.S. Navy officer, his experience includes performance accountability for more than one thousand persons and managing the start-up of a $500 million manufacturing facility.

Ron believes in the strength and support of family, hard work and the courage to make change. One of his favorite sayings is: "Care, but not that much." This helps him keep his perspective and invest energy on things he can control. Because he knows self-awareness and personal improvement bring a fulfilling career and life, he often recommends the book Good to Great by Jim Collins to his coachees.

Ron has been a valued champion of Humanergy since its inception and a part-time associate since 2001. He loves the outdoors, hunting, fishing and especially spending time at his northern Michigan cabin with his grandchildren.
